The figures that you question are from the State of California. Ironically, the CA Dept. of Education, a major source of the statistics that you call falacious, is a major advocate of these immigrant children. In fact they have been very reluctant to share them because they dramaticly reveal data that outrage most reasonable people..ie Prop. 187. Anyway, we do share the same regard statistics. We are in a loop, we are in a loop, we are in a loop, we are in a loop....Thanks...hope to chat with you in another forum soon, I really have enjoyed our discussions...best regards, Thomas, I share with Mark Twain the observance that "there are lies, damned lies and statistics." I don't trust anything the government says, from the number of Viet Cong dead to who gave what order at Ruby Ridge. They have a vested interest in misleading the People...just wait 'til the stock market crashes, you'll see what I mean. And various special interests will twist and distort "facts" and "figures" to advance their own agenda. I'm a Missourian, you have to show me.

We need to step back and view the larger picture, not become so emotionally ininvled that we lose sight that this is America, a Nation completely different than any others. One of our attributes is we are generous and forgiving. Look at how we treated former enemies defeated in wars. We don't need statistics about the Marshall Plan to know what kind of People we are, but if we forget what it is that makes us Americans we just degenerate into being mere citizens of the New World Order.

The immigration problem is a transient event in our long term History. These People come here because there is a demand for their services. If we simply set up booths at the border, examined the incoming workers and sent them in an organized manner to employers who had previously registered their needs for workers, so much pressure can be taken off the People and institutions involved that the social costs will plummet. Regulation and intelligent management of the situation will do wonders to relieve the negative aspects that you decry.

Then, when the corrupt government of Mexico finally falls and the average Mexican has opportunities in his own country that he never dreamed of, we will have to BEG some of them to come back to do the jobs that need doing. I have said this repeatedly in my posts: The individual immigrant is not the problem. The ruling class is, on BOTH sides of the border. You seem to agree with this but obviously prefer to attack the easy target. It does no good to fall into the trap set by the Washington/Wall Street Axis. The ruling class wants you to hate these People because if you tried to help them you'd be in opposition to Wall Street and they deeply fear any opposition that sees clearly who is the real enemy of America. They keep things stirred up on the local level hoping folks will take the easy way of hatred and ignorance because traits like that make People easier to control and manipulate. If we oppose the lowly immigrant then we don't oppose his tormentor, the ruling classes. By Thomas, Linda's facts about the radicals may be correct but she's trying to make a mountain out of a mole hill. The group she describes doesn't have a widespread following. She uses them as a straw man to knock down all Latinos. This is not fair. In a society of a quarter-billion we can expect to hear every possible shade of opinion. But to condemn all white People because of the KKK or all Blacks because of Farrakhan is unfair as well.

There are a million Americans currently behind bars. Many are white and many are black, but most are criminals. We are a crime ridden society; what the criminals among the "illegals" do is not unique. A certain percentage of every group has criminal tendencies but this is still a very small percentage. And many of the crimes "illegals" commit are of the same variety that hoboos did in the depression. We survived that crisis and we'll survive the current crisis IF we remain true to our God-given Humanity.

But if we bully the weak and turn away the beggar we are denying the very traits that made us a great Nation: "With malice toward none, and charity for all," is what put America apart from the venal world. We should preserve this noble tradition, not abandon it and we should endeavor to live up to our ideals because ideals are what makes us America.

The blame goes deeper than just the government. The current government is no longer organizing a democratic economy for the whole populace, but is serving, and serving with distinction, the Wall Street oligarchy. Money talks and politicians listen. Washington and Wall Street go hand in hand and now they want to yoke the rest of us to their New World Order.

Are you sure that California's decline can't be traced more readily to Prop 13? After all, prior to 1978 there wasn't anywhere near the fiscal problems you describe. But once services started getting cut, the problems festered and increased. Instead of having the funds to keep problems nipped in the bud, and the quality of life high, Californians voted their most narrow interests. Ben Franklin said "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and with 18 years of hindsight we can see the cure will cost a ton.

Is it true what I heard that Californians won't even support their own school system? That they have to be bribed with get rich quick schemes like the lottery to give any money for public education? The justifications for the lottery and Prop 13 had nothing to do with immigrants but everything to do with greed. Californians apparently have short memories. Greed has become good in the Golden State. The motto used to be "I found it," but has lately become: "I grabbed my share and you can't have any or my Gestapo will arrest, try and execute you on the side of the nearest road."

I think Americans are better than this.
And re "invasion," now you know how the Indians must've fe

Thomas, I certainly understand your concerns but it seems you're too narrowly focused. You see a single tree and think its the whole forest. There are many other radical transformations of society going on that are far more subtle and far more dangerous than migrant workers.

The facts and figures prove, for example, that the traditional family structure has broken down to the point that many families think its perfectly ok to have kids and them shunt them off to daycare so the mother can work. Sometimes families do this so they can afford luxuries like BMWs and Volvos, but more often it is an economic necessity for the mother to work.

It wasn't like this 30-40 years ago. After we fought WWII to preserve our way of life, our way of life was radically changed in a way that benefitted the wealthy. Average families that once enjoyed a middle-class lifestyle on a single income found they had to neglect the children just to make ends meet. Instead of a child being nurtured all day everyday by its mother for the first five years of life, many kids now spend their formative years in the "care" of strangers who get paid to warehouse America's most precious assets just like a parking lot attendant gets paid to watch your car. This economic environment inhibits normal family bonding and kids grow up believing its more important to possess material things than to form stable relationships.

This is why the divorce rate has skyrocketed. Because wealth has been concentrated into ever fewer hands the ever increasing numbers of Americans must scramble just to keep pace. This new economic climate leaves families little time or inclination to organize and oppose their new masters. The New World Order leaves no room for the vast majority of decent, hard-working Americans to live a life-style that previous generations had grown accustomed to. Big media encourages this radical transformation by constantly propagandizing that women should neglect their families so they can work and thus become better consumers of the products advertised in big media.

Don't worry about the "class" aspects of this arguement, Thomas. The disparity of the classes has always been THE big problem in America but the rulers have always sought to portray the problem as one of race, and now "illegals." The ruling class wants everyone else to be at each other's throats beause if we're fighting, we ain't uniting. The ruling class wants to eat the cake and have it too while preventing everyone else from getting a fair slice.

It is Latinos who best exemplify traditional American values today, even those who are not citizens. I'm sure you have statistics that show the highest rate of single income families is in the Latino community. They still believe in home values and they still believe in the work ethic. Your statistics should show the dollar amount of money earned by "illegals" that goes back to their extended families in Mexico. An entire family can live a year on the remittance of just six months "slaving" here and if it wasn't for this income millions of poor Mexicans would revolt and finally bring about the change you and me both want. Gov. Wilson is not as far sighted but his policy of sealing the border and deporting "illegals" will help accomplish that end.

Thomas,

The "depressing impact on wages" is far more pronounced in the influence of tens of millions of third world residents churning out cheap little consumer items such as those hawked at Wal-Mart. Americans used to produce virtually everything they consumed, a situation quite good for the economy as a whole.

However, today's corporate culture doesn't care about the good of the economy as a whole. Everything the corporate state does is keyed to increasing its power and profits and damn the greater good. The rich are getting richer and the poor are...getting guns? (Its a variant of Pat's "peasants with pitchforks" heading for Washington...displaced workers with Uzis heading for Wall Street.)

Wall Street spends a fortune protecting its place. Its apologists are everywhere. Lobbyists, Madison Avenue, Big Media and even the once somber groves of Academia are now just fecund fields fertilized with Wall Street's money.

To protect its position Wall Street leaves no stone unturned and no red herring undeployed. Diverting the public's attention from Wall Street's pernicious and self justifying power is a necessity of grave importance to their continued hegemony.

Thus we see People who are totally poor and powerless being portrayed as devious conspirators out to destroy truth, justice and the American Way. Its the old BIG LIE technique. If you're wealthy and connected you can easily blame (or frame) a totally innocent party for you own crimes. Have you been looting the country, stealing our rights, treating with foreign ruling classes and SUPERVISING while our collective standard of living and quality of life goes plunging down the tubes, and don't want anyone to know it?

Just BLAME THE VICTIMS! Create a firestorm of negative stories, wrap yourself in the flag and go on a witch-hunt! There are plenty of bigots and fools who will follow you. And they'll be so blinded by emotion they wouldn't recognize the truth if it bit them on the chin!

Migrants have no power. But they sure can be manipulated to increase the power of those who are the true enemy of America. Incidents like this are used to justify continued misuse of law enforcement power. There are those who abhor flagrant abuse of Americans by Federal Law Enforcement at Waco and Ruby Ridge who then turn a blind eye when the local gun and badge comes down on People of color.

We must abide by certain principles, that all People (even tourists) have the same rights as anyone else in this country. And if you've read the Declaration of Independence you'll know that these are inalienable rights that extend far beyond our borders.

The last thing the ruling classes of Mexico and the United States want is the oppressed People of Mexico rising up and getting rid of the ruling class like we did on July 4, 1776.

The ruling class keeps us fearful and hostile and pleading for their "protection," but the only security we get is that

Thomas, Its always important to put things in their proper perspective and look at them in an unemotional manner.

There is a difference, a BIG difference, between criminals who come here to commit crimes and People who come here to work. Even if undocumented workers are technically "illegal," their basic impulse is to work, to save and send their earnings back to their families and to endure the kind of hardships suffered by our own Pioneers who traveled across and settled Lands once owned by Mexico.

Most undocumented workers are not bad People. They are just stuck between a rock (the Mexican ruling class) and a hard place (American public opinion.)

The vast majority, both today and historically, have been honest and hardworking with their "crime" basically a white-collar crime, one of the "victimless" variety that many Americans commit. Indeed, these People have been encouraged to come here and work "illegally" by business for many DECADES and now the rug is suddenly being pulled out leaving many with no place to go.

But the sleazebag politicians won't even attempt to make an honest distinction but instead go for the easy appeal to harder instincts. They are willing to insult the American intelligence and violate common decency for some cheap publicity. The number of criminals is small but Wison and company have folks believing its the way ALL Mexican migrants are.

Check social security records and find out how much money has been put in the accounts of "illegals" using phony #'s and who will never get it back. Why not divert that cash to help pay for services? Remember what Castro did with the Mariel boatlift of '80? He emptied prisons and mental wards and dumped them on Uncle Sucker. The corrupt Mexican ruling class has done the same. We deport criminals after their terms are up and the next day they're back in. The negotiators of NAFTA didn't demand the Mexican government assume responsibility for the returned crooks because they were so focused on helping U.S. corporations reap big profits they allowed the Mexican government to steal the store. "Illegals" are not the enemy of America. There have been "illegals" for decades. What's new is NAFTA and FIFTY BILLION DOLLAR bailouts of the corrupt Mexican ruling class.

The "illegal" situation is being used as a smokescreen to keep impassioned eyes diverted from the criminal alliance between the Mexican and American ruling classes.

A wise old saying goes well here: If you owe the bank a thousand dollars its your problem. If you owe the bank a million dollars its the bank's problem.

Well, U.S. banks have a BIG problem because $50,000,000,000 is BIG money (as Ev Dirkson might say.) And We the People have a BIG problem because "our" government willingly and with complete knowledge put us in this situation and it will be the People, not the banks, and certainly not the politicians who'll have to get us out. The smirking Mexican ruling class snookered us into this no-win situation and they think the threat of default will keep US in line.

If there weren't a demand for the "illegal's" services there would be no supply. People have come here for centuries because of the oppression, both political and economic, they suffer in their home countries.

Most countries don't have the political and economic system that we did that created this great Nation. For the past 50 years the U.S. government has broken faith with the ideals of freedom by supporting authoritarian regimes, especially in the Americas. The rationale for this was the cold war need to keep the communists from encroaching in this hemisphere, but that menace is now dead, and with it the need to support criminal governments South of the Border. But the U.S. government has revealed itself to be criminal by continuing to conspire with Latin American governments.

Part of this conspiracy is the long standing agreement to take in excess Latin population in order to relieve pressure on those governments that may lead to Revolution. Instead of trying to alter the political/economic system that cause Latin poverty "our" government props up these governments by lending money and other support which legitimizes the very kind of conditions against which we revolted in 1776. If our system is so successful (and it is) why don't we try to export it so oppressive Latin governments can be more like "We the People?"

Because we don't, we can reasonably assume that the U.S. government is more concerned about the well being and further enrichment of wealthy people both here and abroad than it is about the vast majority of American citizens.

Pete Wilson as a Senator was the #1 friend of Latin refuges doing all he could for his "contributors" in agri-business and sweat shops to bring in cheap labor. But when his policies became excessive and degenerated into massive illegal immigration he bailed and became virulently anti-Mexican. But he is too dishonest to admit that it is the corrupt policies of the Mexican ruling class in conjunction with the Washington/Wall Street Axis that causes the immigrants to want/need to come in the first place.

An equitable distribution of land and wealth in Mexico will solve the problem, pronto, but that will take a Revolution.

Americans must ask which is better: Supporting the corrupt Mexican ruling class and getting their wretched refuse in return, OR supporting a Revolution that will throw out the crooks and establish a true free market democracy.

One doesn't have to be from California to be revolted by demagogues who appeal to bigotry and ignorance.

The tape shows the guy was not driving. He was in the middle of the crowd in the back, wearing a light blue jacket with a dark patch on back below left shoulder making him clearly visible. He exits the truck behind a guy in red, then turns around to help the woman. I think the police put out some disinformation re the "confession" you mention.

The U.S. government is willing to go after Noriega and the Columbians because they have no political cover in the U.S. but give dope running Mexican police a free ride because Wall Street and American politicians are in up to their armpits in the sleaze and corruption of Mexico. The DEA and FBI take their orders from the Attorney General who is a political apointee who takes orders from the White House which needs to keep the sleaze flowing smoothly and out of sight.

Agents of the FBI are so cowardly and corrupt that they won't investigate high level corruption between the Washington/Wall Street Axis and the Mexican ruling class because they're terrified if they cross the politicians they'd be transfered to some American Siberia like Montana, where nothing ever happens.

The FBI is just a private security force for the criminals in government and big business and its behavior is identical to the "Federales," Mexico's notoriously corrupt national police. The FBI closes its eyes to the massive illegal activities in Mexico, all the illegal bribes paid by U.S. corporations to Mexican officials, because it has been so ordered by those who passed NAFTA.

The dealers who sell drugs, or the users who buy them?
If there was no demand there would be no supply.
Politicians have passed laws to take the cars of drug users.
This is supposed to be a deterrent.
The courts have upheld this law.

If we really want to deter illegal immigration we should take the example from the war on drugs and apply it to the businesses and individuals who employ illegals. Confiscate the Wall Street owned farms and break them up and sell to farm workers and do the same with the million dollar homes of those who employ illegals, and we'll dry up the demand in no time.

Unfortunately, however, the rich folk who would be affected by this plan also own the politicians who write the laws so we can expect to see more Temeculas, not fewer illegals.

Greg,

Its true we Americans are not well liked around the world, but the rest of the world sure likes our money. The banks and corporations and the Bush/Clinton Administration get together and send jobs and capital to third world dictatorships, draining our economy and putting many Americans out of work.

But they are smart enough to mask this treason by manipulating public opinion by making it look like the undocumented worker from Mexico is the wrongdoer. People like Wilson and Dole like to trigger an emotional reaction from the public by portraying the very visible economic refugee as the enemy when in fact he is a victim.

The politicians controlled by Wall Street set up this enemy to distract the public's attention from the true problem, which is the export of jobs and capital. Most Americans don't understand "capital flight" as well as they understand an "illegal" climbing over a border fence. Hence they develop a hatred of the Mexicans and demand action be taken against them without understanding it is the greedy corporate executive looting his company for millions while closing down American factories and sending billions overseas who is doing the big damage to our society.

The Mexican ruling class is totally corrupt but it is also in total cahoots with our ruling class. That's why we bailed them out $50billion last year.

And that's why we need Revolutions on both sides of the border. Get rid of the corrupt ruling classes and the vast majority of Americans and Mexicans will benefit.

Maybe its the extortion and other abuses of the Mexican People by the Mexican ruling class that is chasing these folks here. Hopefully, we'll seal our borders and round up the "illegals" and dump them back over the border, just like Wilson wants, and that will cause a Revolution there that will result in true liberation and a reapportionment of land and wealth to make up for centuries of oppresssion. Then the People won't need to come here for work.

We should be thankful no-one was killed for then the lawsuits would truly be mega.

Greg, James and Keith:

When you hear of an old truck carrying 20 men at around 140 lbs each thats nearly a ton and a half of weight, you'd have to be pretty gullible to believe it managed to do 85mph much less 100.

What police frequently do in high profile cases is exaggerate the facts in order to get public opinion on their side. The other side doesn't have the same media access, so the cops get a free ride in molding public perceptions to fit their story. The FACT reported is the chase covered 70 miles and took two hours. Thats an average 35mph.

The rhetorical fast one the police are pulling is actually the speed at which police cars traveled to CATCH UP to the chase, not the speed of the chase itself. Crowded freeways, heavy loads and steep hills always conspire to keep speeds down.

We can see clearly the lies of the police in the statement of the deputy who claimed that he was being pelted by BEER cans. As if he could tell the difference between a Bud and a Pepsi at 100mph!

Greg,

Do you happen to recall the Temecula Tragedy several years ago? A Border patrol agent spotted a truck filled with People he believed to be "illegal" so he gave chase. The chase was not on the freeway but on suburban streets, but it was high speed. It ended when the truck collided with a car filled with a young, local family. The family of four was killed and so were 17 Mexicans.

I don't know if the Border Patrol agent received a promotion for his decisive action that saved us Americans the extreme hardship of allowing these "illegals" to pick our food while enduring sub-standard conditions and sub-minimum wages, but I guess Gov Wilson pinned a medal on him. IMAGINE! This hero, this paragon of red, white and blue patriotism, this brother of the FBI and ATF, SINGLEHANDEDLY prevented 17 hard working "illegals" from being employed by some mega-farm!

And all it cost was four innocent lives! Unless, of course you count those 17 illegals as "innocents." I'm sure there are some bleeding hearts who would have you believe those 17 People riding in the back, not a single one of whom was driving, didn't deserve to die. But they WERE breaking the law, and this IS America c1996, and we DO have leaders like Dan Lundgren and Pete Wilson, so WHY be decent?

After all, the voters threw out George Bush, so now we're no longer obligated to be a kinder, gentler Nation.

Yes, my friend, it was a dangerous situation to throw out pieces of the camper shell onto the roadway and that could have caused an accident fatal to innocents, but since when does law enforcement care about innocents? They are not capable of learning from past tragedies. Instead when they see the chance of reducing California's 500,000; "illegals" by TWENTY whole People, they go for it! Why cut the chase?

And if they can vent their adrenaline in the process, thats just icing on the cake.

The incident in LA yesterday is another example of how our country is being invaded from south of the boarder. These members of the Sheriffs department were doing their job and looking for illegal aliens entering the country. When they spotted the truck carrying off those Mexicans the truck took them on a high speed chase, which endangered the lives of innocent people. Most of them escaped and the 2 that were beaten should be lucky they weren't killed. Our law enforcement officials should be given permission to use deadly force to stop this invasion. I saw the film of the woman being lead from the jail. Why wasn't she thrown on the next truck south? It's time we stopped playing games with these criminals that steal our welfare, healthcare, and jobs. Ed

Gary, I listened to Rush today, (at least the monologue, and then intermittently,) and there was no sign of concern about this breakdown of "law 'n order."

He did talk at length about his affection for cigars and food. He talked about a picture in the NY Times of Bob Dole in Bal Harbour and a bathing suit, and that segued him into a discussion of a good restaurant there which got him onto his favorite one in Kansas City.

Cigars and food. I guess Rush's way of addressing the John McSherry tragedy.

Can you imagine how much money would be extorted from the familys of Americans who pulled the same crap in Mexico?
Now these illegals will no doubt extort money from the American taxpayer in the form of lawsuits, that will probably be initiated by the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund. America..Land of Plenty...OF CHUMPS!

These illegals almost killed other drivers, throws articles from their camper shell at the police, etc. Good law abidding citizens? I think not. These scumbags are lawbreaking human trash. If they had killed someone you probably would still think they were victims. They got what they deserved. I am a taxpayer who has no tolerance for criminals.

I couldn't agree more. What galls me though is the fact that you will undoubtedly hear conservatives claiming no brutality took place. Somehow, we missed the threatening violent gestures of the guy they were beating. Sadly, more and more, the word conservative can be easily interchanged with racist. I think I'll listen to Rush Limbaugh today so I can hear his gallant defense of this latest instance of brutality caught on tape. Gary Tonight's news brings us yet another revolting videotaped display of police brutality. The tape was made by KCAL TV from a helicopter in broad daylight and shows clearly the end of a 70 mile chase by Riverside Deputies of a truck carrying apparent undocumented workers.

The truck stopped and about 20 people jumped out and ran into the bushes. No-one was armed and no-one made any threatening moves. One man stayed behind to help a woman get out of the cab and he was accosted and brutally beaten by two officers. The tape showed he was unarmed and did not resist and still he was beaten. He wasn't even the truck's driver so in the eyes of the law, (though not in the eyes of the police,) was just an innocent passenger. After they beat him they beat the woman, who was also not resisting.

This is the climate of America today. If you are a member of an unpopular ethnic or racial group the people with guns and badges think they can terrorize and brutalize you with impunity. Law enforcement has regressed to the point where they now resemble Mexico's famously brutal and corrupt cops.

Law enforcement now acts with pure, atavistic bloodlust and they think they can get away with it because of the support they receive from professional politicians like Gov Wilson, who once championed Mexican workers.

Wilson, a political whore if there ever was one, is willing to do ANYTHING for money and votes as he feeds on the fear and bigotry that he and his ilk have inflicted on the People of California.

He does not act like an American, but is now a close cousin to the tin-horn dictators from South of the Border. Wilson will be known to History as the California Caudillo, and the damned thing is, he thinks that's a compliment!
