Otis & Richard,

I agree with Richard, one can be despicably aggressive. Its the whole Social Darwinism thing again. The strong survive, (but only because they learned to be ever on the attack, keeping their potential conquerors always off-balance and disorganized.) A tiny minority rule and abuse vast numbers via this method.

The dictionary I use, (like so many it has a "Webster" in the title,) defines "abject" as 1) sunk to a low condition, 2) worthless, mean, despicable, degraded, contemptible. Just like the PRC, the U.S. government, Wall Street, Nixon and Clinton.

Actually this last sentence wasn't in the dictionary, (but only because Ambrose Bierce has passed.)

Actually, according to many of the posts on this thread, doesn't Clinton sound kind of aggressive for someone so abject?

Let's see. Clinton is an abject leftist. But in matters concerning China, an abjectly leftist regime for some 47 years, the President toes the line of such abject Wall Streeters as Bush and Nixon. He ignores their human rights violations and other murderous activities in order to make China safe for Wall Street. He aids and abets a $40,000,000,000+ annual trade deficit which only helps keep in power the blood stained butchers of Tiananmen by rubber-stamping MFN every year, because that's what Wall Street wants. He'll travel to Beijing if he's re-elected, thus discouraging the opposition while encouraging the tyrants and giving them credibility. Just like Nixon and Bush did. So if you're worried about "disastrous consequences" please don't ignore the very real potential of the CCP and the Army using OUR money to finance THEIR military modernization and build-up.

In the coming Century we'll face yet another arms race, which is EXACTLY what Wall Street want$.

Get real, Richard. When was the last time ANY "leftist" Democrat was so deeply in bed with Wall Street?
