The "help" they've gotten from all over the world is from those who just want to help themselves- to Mexico's riches!

With help like that no wonder they're still so poor. The smart, crooked Mexicans get rich by making deals with smart, crooked foreigners to help loot the country. The poor and powerless, of course, have no say. (What else is new?) So some come here, a sort of consolation prize for having their country stolen out from under them.

The cure for mordida? Revolution!

You may have a lot of sympathy for the underdogs of Mexico but Mexico has had a lot longer than the U.S. to fix their economy and with help from all over the world. We have given them enough money to build fences a mile high across the bottom part of the U.S. Mex. border. The truth is what most honest people that really know about Mexico like Senator Gonzales of Texas and others who know that Mexico runs on mordida. utter corruption. therefore it will take tens of years to ever overcome that it it ever does. Another thing is the population bomb that has 6 million or so young men entering the job market every year. The bottom line whether anyone wants to admit it or not is that these people are overpopulating themselves away from the table. I saw the proud papa of eighteen children and his wife posing in front of their job where they live and work...the Mexico City Dump

Isn't that wonderful all you disbelievers in contraception? We cannot continue to be the popoff valve for this sort of wild card political bull corn. Even a liberal would admit that there has to be an end to the lemmings hauling across to the U.S. Not only Mexican Nationals come thru the southern borders, everyone else does also. Bec.

Ross,

My sympathy lies with the underdog. That used to be one of this Country's defining traits. (Ever read De Tocqueville?) Before, that is, the Me Generation pretty much killed off altruistic thinking. Most Americans are so frazzled nowadays they can only manage to build a wall around their hearts and slap a rusty padlock through their minds: permanently closed and out of business. All the better to eat us, my dear.

You're perfectly welcome to define me by your own lights, you need no "admissions" from me, just use your own mind and make your own conclusions, but remember: ALWAYS! Check your premises.

I think you made a fox pause with your comment about Mexico as a "Second World Country." That term usually signifies communist countries, like Cuba. But maybe it wasn't much of a Freudian Slip, after all. After all, the guy most Mexicans blame for their economic fever is the former President, Salinas, who has been the guest in luxury for the past 4-5 months, of Fidel Castro. I guess we can see where his sympathies lie. First he loots the country and conducts years of narco-terrorism against America, then he hand picks his successor, then after he is revealed to be a scoundrel, heads for the succor of Carribean isles to spend his ill-gotten gain a la Robert Vesco. No wonder Wall Street liked him so much, he was one of them!

You're certainly right that Mexico could and should be prosperous, but Wall Street ain't the way. You can't rationally expect a backward economy and culture to suddenly jump into mature, information age capitalism. They have to walk before they can run. The alliance between Wall Street and the Mexican ruling class serves ONLY to further enrich the already wealthy elite while impoverishing everyone else. America was not built by Wall Street. It was nourished by Main Street, by millions of average People, farmers, small businessmen, workers and immigrants ALL of whom were guided by the invisible hand that was their own common sense and good nature. Wall Street raped and continues to rape Mexico, aided and abetted by the PRI which "drugs" the People into submission in exchange for riches. The current bastard of this union is Zedillo.

With Wall Street the People haven't got a chance, but under a policy of "greatest good for the greatest number" Mexico will prosper in the next century as we did in the last.

By the way, Ross, have you ever noticed that the more countries like Germany, Japan, China, and Korea prosper from Wall Street, the more the average American suffers?

"Their" is plural. The crimes you refer to is the result of a singular action, as in "He, the driver, did these things." Even if the disintegration of the camper shell was not caused by 100mph winds you cannot logically accuse everyone of participating.
